Public Service Recognition Week – Fact #1

Federal Employees Continue to Benefit While Private Sector Suffers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — While America's public sector workers play an important role in the maintenance of the United States government and its agencies, the number of public sector workers and their responsibilities has so greatly expanded that it has begun to distort commerce and unnecessarily burden taxpayers. With the scope of government ever-growing, private companies are finding themselves hamstrung by government regulation or in direct competition with public workers or government backed companies.

Everyday this week the Alliance for Worker Freedom will release statistics that highlight many of the problems that accompany America's public sector workers:

Federal employees on average earn $11,091 more than their private sector counterparts, a discrepancy every American pays for.

The Alliance for Worker Freedom recognizes the necessity of public workers but suggests that America would be better served if many of the current functions undertaken by public sector workers were completed by private businesses.
